Comments: We are in a time of severe weather and environmental changes, the last thing we need is a mine that will cause more water shortage for town and farms, cancerous dust pollution that will not only affect the surrounding properties, but also the entire township and its surrounds. The 200 jobs it will create will only be for specifically trained people which might not live here. It will also destroy over 2000 jobs as the farms downstream from the mine will most likely have to shut shop due to pollution and water shortage. The noise levels will be disturbing as well as the demolition and removal of flora and fauna to create the mine. And on top of that its not even Australian owned and will serve international investors (China???) Please please please do not let this go ahead.... once it gets green light there will be no return for humans or nature.... Perhaps a solar farm, recycling stations, wind or water turbines etc would be a much wiser investment in times like these....
